Siri for Reminders

You can easily set a reminder using Siri.

If you use sticky notes to post reminders everywhere, you can replace them by using Siri with the Reminders app on your device. Try it out!

Tip: Siri is usually turned on during the setup process for your device. But if you haven't yet set up Siri, contact a Hadley learning expert for help.

Tip: To get the most interaction from Siri, make sure VoiceOver (Apple's built-in screen reading software) is running on your device. If you're not familiar with VoiceOver, check out the Listen with VoiceOver series.

Using Siri to Set a Reminder

1. Think of something you need to remember and want to be reminded about, for example, picking up your laundry at 3:00 today.
2. Say, "Hey Siri" or "Siri." Then say, "Remind me to pick up my laundry at 3:00 PM today."

Tip: Saying "Siri" or "Hey Siri" depends on how you set up the Siri feature on your device. For help setting up Siri, contact a Hadley learning expert.

3. Siri will confirm your reminder by saying, “OK, I added ‘Pick up my laundry’ for this afternoon at 3:00 PM.”
4. When 3:00 arrives, a notification to pick up your laundry will appear on your device. Siri will continue to listen, and you can make another request, if you like.
5. Swipe up to close Siri.
6. You can also set reminders for when you arrive at or leave a location.

Tip: For example, you could say something like, “Remind me when I get home to feed my cats.” Then, you would receive a notification on your phone when you arrive home. Or, you could say, “Hey Siri, remind me to bring the dry cleaning ticket when I leave the house,” and you’ll get a notification on your device when you leave your house.
